My Disease is NOT Who I AM!
I have not changed. I am the same person I have always been. I now have more information about my body, and new considerations and choices, and I make decisions according to my current frame of reference and priorities. I am as free as I ever was to choose how I live, what I do, who I am, and with whom I associate.

A new chapter in my life is opening and I approach it with the courage and consideration I deserve.
